CLEVELAND ELECTED.

The latest returns up to the hour of going to press indicate very positively that Cleveland has carried New York and is therefore elected. There seems to be no doubt of this whatever.

Glory hallelujah!

THE SITUATION.

Since THE HERALD went to press yesterday morning there has been a remarkable change in the political horizon. The late dispatches on Wednesday morning indicated that Cleveland and Hendricks electors had been chosen in all the northern States, in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and in Indiana, and there was a reasonably fair prospect for the Democrats carrying Wisconsin and Michigan, and they had a fighting chance in Illinois. Much of this has been changed. At this writing the situation stands thus: The Democrats have carried the solid south by increased majorities; Connecticut and New Jersey are held firmly; Indiana is in doubt, with the returns as they come in all showing favorably for the Republicans; Wisconsin is certainly Republican, and the Democrats cannot hope to win in Illinois; Michigan promises to Cleveland and Hendricks only six of her thirteen electoral votes, and Blaine in New York State is moving down upon the cities of New York and Brooklyn with what promises to be a majority that will swamp the 58,000 plurality he will there encounter, and give him the thirty-six electors of the Empire State by a plurality ranging from 4,000 to 8,000. There is a bare probability that later returns from some of the interior counties will show a larger Democratic vote than is now looked for, and thus check the unexpected avalanche that is running in Blaine's favor. However, we anticipate no such luck, and cannot help the fear that New York has been lost to the Democrats.

Admitting that the Empire State, with its thirty-six electoral votes, has gone to Blaine, what is the outlook for the Democrats? It is extremely gloomy. With the solid south and New Jersey and Connecticut, Cleveland and Hendricks have 168 votes in the electoral college, or 33 short of the 201 necessary to elect. It is quite probable they will get 6 from Michigan, leaving them still 27 short, and nowhere to draw them from. Should they be so fortunate as to get the 15 from Indiana, of which there seems little prospect at this time, they would yet lack 12; California continues in doubt, but its 8 votes are insufficient even were they to be had. And here we must stop, falling back upon the declaration made in these columns at the opening of the campaign, that whoever received the electoral votes of the Empire State would necessarily get the Presidency.

There is a hope—and that is all that can be said.

"LIBERAL" RUIN.

The local election for Delegate to Congress is another lesson to the Liberals who, however, seem too stupid to learn. There is a decided falling off in the Liberal vote, and this in the face of the efforts that were put forth to find the anti-Mormon heart, the harangues, the music, the newspaper arguments and the torchlight processions. It is also significant that the greatest falling off occurred in places where the most labor was performed and in what were always regarded as Liberal strongholds, notably Ogden and Park City. It would be discourteous as well as unfair to attribute the loss of Liberal votes to the unpopularity of the party's candidate. It is only truthful to say that Captain Smith enjoys as fair a reputation as any of the the professed Liberals, and is quite as able and intelligent as the average leader of the organization. The small vote polled cannot be traced to any ill-will towards Captain Smith himself. His failure is due wholly to the bad cause which he represented. He labored to a wicked end, devoting his efforts and energies to an evil purpose. Any other man would have done no better than he in working to advance the cause which he vainly tried to forward.

The truth is, the Liberals themselves, as they grow older and learn wisdom, are tiring of following the wild, senseless, reckless course they started out to follow; they are learning not only of the evil of their way, but of the folly of pursuing that way; and as they learn they leave the narrow Liberal platform, which year after year reduces its plant's and year after year lessens its supporters. At the rate of decrease noted during the past ten years, about two years hence the Liberal party will consist solely of the candidates for office, and the platform be a myth.

All good citizens are pleased to note this general and certain decline of a party whose growth would mean destruction to the best interests of the best Territory in the Union, and whose success would be failure to all that is worthy and good in government and society. We hope there will arise another Liberal whose ambition equals that of Captain Ransford Smith; we hope he will try to restore the party to something like its former self; the reason why we hope for these things is because in the event of their coming about, the few remaining Liberals will have an opportunity to desert the outfit, and the people get the chance to bury the organization out of sight.

THE SAN FRANCISCO Alta, in an editorial comment on the Clawson conviction, says: "It has been proved that, contrary to the prevailing belief, polygamists can be convicted in Utah, and with this encouragement the Gentiles will henceforth make renewed efforts for the prosecution of violations of the law. This is the right way to suppress polygamy—the only way it can be suppressed in a country of constitutional liberty. Talk about bayonets and cannon to suppress polygamy is foolish."

WHATSOEVER MAY be the declared result of Tuesday's voting, Grover Cleveland stands forth as an honest man, who has no cause to blush for his noble, self-respecting course in a campaign that has been the hottest and dirtiest ever fought in this or any other country. There is no true and honest man in the country but would rather be Grover Cleveland defeated than James G. Blaine elected.

THAT REPUBLICAN buffoon and blatherer, Roswell G. Horr, Representative in Congress from the Eighth Michigan district, has been defeated. There are compensations in life.

BEN. BUTLER and John Kelly have earned the eternal scorn and contempt of the American people, but they have won Blaine's gratitude.
